

Howling Against the Wind

Its on a late Thursday evening that Lenore Hanson sits in her parked car waiting, near the palatial digs of Dr. Samuel Gleeson. Shes been stalking him. Her TMJ medical implant device failed, and she blames him for her ongoing medical woes. Shed asked him if the implant was bio-compatible. He had looked her straight in the eyes and lied.

The implant hadnt even been tested in animals. She wants him to have to eat his prevaricate words. Feeling demeaned by the Austin medical communitys code of silence, Lenore considers murdering Dr. Gleeson. And shes not the only resident of Austin, Texas that wants him dead. Theres a line which begins with his wife Paula, and it ends with Dr. Landon, his surgical partner, who is tired of being a party to Dr. Gleesons surgical screw-ups. And all the while, Lee Hanson, Lenores husband hasnt a clue that shes homicidal. Experiencing emotional difficulty in accepting his wifes condition, Lee has slid into a deep depression while he tries to keep his family together. Lenore is a wife and mother living on the emotional edge. She struggles daily with pain and the draw backs of heavy medication. She often sits reflecting on her past and considering what kind of future she will have. How can I murder Dr. Gleeson? She thinks. Could I get away with it? Howling Against the Wind examines the medical implant controversy and how dreadful the consequences can be when money-hungry surgeons take advantage of patients merely seeking help for their health problems.
