

The Fables of La Fontaine

Unashamedly borrowing his inspiration and material from Aesop's fables, Jean de La Fontaine wrote his stories in French verse during the late seventeenth century. His fables have been popular with children and adults alike ever since. These are timeless stories of country folk, heroes of Greek mythology, and familiar creatures. Each tale contains a moral for living, as relevant today as they were 300 years ago. This large-format (8 1/2 x 11 1/2 inches) volume gathers more than a hundred of La Fontaine's most beloved fables for children. Jean-Noel Rochut has illustrated his magical fables in color, while C.J. Moore has faithfully translated them into flowing English verse to delight the ears of both young and old. This classic family favorite is fully illustrated in color throughout. The fables in this collection include favorites such as The Grasshopper and the Ant, The Crow and the Fox, and The Wolf and the Lamb.
