The ashes and the human excreta are mixed together, and removed by the agency of one or other form of Earth Closet, taking that term generally for an apparatus which is not a cesspool, and which has to be frequently emptied of its contents in a more or less dry state, and which is wholly above ground. The annexed woodcut shows a good arrangement, in REMOVAL OF REFUSE. 37 which the principles are carried out in the simplest manner. They are these: cnouno PLAN. sEcToN_AT/LB. SIMPLE ASH OR EARTH COTTAGE-CLOSETS USED IN THE WEST OF ENGLAND. a. Seat joist. d. Dry earth; flat enclosed,. ep. No. 3. Sunk _ receptacle, concrete and 0. Covered fiat; open., cement; _water-tight. Ist. All the human excreta, and no other refuse, are deposited in it, with the frequent daily addition of either dry earth or ashes. 2nd. The ashes are applied, on every oceasmz, by raising the cover on its hinges. 3rd. A sloping slate or slab directs all contents, either to a slightly inclined stone or concrete floor, which ought to be above the level of the surrounding ground; or into a receiving tank on low wheels. This mixture is conveyed to the garden, or to the earth somewhere, once or twice in every week. The rear of the closets is protected by a roof whereby no rain can enter to dilute the sewage. It has to be noted here, Ist, that in the arrangements of Nos. 1 and 2, all the refuse is absolutely above the. surface; and 2nd, that the worst known form of closet is the common garden one of the open, so-called dry cesspool. The principle above stated applies equally to the arrangements of the pig-sty, viz., that the floor is above the level of the surrounding earth, and slopes gently to wards the entrance. Now...
