

The care and regulation of childrens teeth

Excerpt from The Care and Regulation of Childrens Teeth No apology is necessary for placing this little work before the general public. Those who have rightly come to the conclusion that the care and regulation of childrens teeth is an important and serious subject will appreciate fully the value of the advice given ; whilst others, who from carelessness, want of thought, neglect, or fear of putting their children to pain and inconvenience, will, it is hoped, consider seriously the necessity for the more careful supervision of and attention to the teeth of those for whose appearance, health, and strength (bodily and mentally) they are responsible. The authors experience has proved to him that it is absolutely necessary to the well-being, and in the interest, of future generations to induce the public to realise the importance of having regular and useful teeth.
