

Pitch To Me Online: A Ca$h Course In Todays Film Finance

This book takes a candid look at how to take the risk out of film finance. It helps filmmakers understand film finance from an investor perspective and how to pitch their project to reach the right investor audience online. It demonstrates how investors can identify, measure, and mitigate risk to achieve better outcomes and higher returns on investments. It compares and contrasts the film finance industry to the more familiar construction industry. It introduces an online platform called www.pitch2me.net where filmmakers and film finance experts can meet and make deals. The book provides powerful but easy to understand illustrations, tables, and charts to grasp the film finance process. It helps visualize the waterfalls of revenues and how to maximize profitability. Readers will be able to identify common pitfalls in film finance and how to avoid them. It decodes industry jargon and reveals their practical application. Without giving financial advice, it supports and promotes the broadening the pool of potential film investors. It provides a compelling case for filmmakers to use the Internet to showcase their projects giving them widest opportunity for exposure and funding. Additionally, it compares Crowd Funding to Professional Online Funding.
